Local News

Rev. Mr. McNeil was a visitor in Calgary this week.

The Crossfield Livery property is being improved by a coat of paint, also by a high board fence which is being constructed in the rear.

Major R. L. Boyle went to Calgary Wednesday in connection with preparations for the encampment of the Fifteenth Light Horse, which takes place there this month.

The success of an agricultural fair is largely dependent upon the interest taken in it by the farmers and their families. Be sure to make your entries in good season.

Mr. Trowhill, a brother of the late Mrs. Lane, from Woodstock, Ontario, arrived Sunday morning with a car of settler's effects. Mr. Lane and his teams on Monday helped him to move his things out to Mr. Lane's place while he looks around for a piece of land to suit him. He says that several other families intend to come and will all settle in the same neighborhood if possible.

Crossfield School District debentures have been sold this week, and brought a good premium. As will be remembered, the debentures are for $15,000 and will run for twenty years. The board has not yet decided on plans, but it is practically certain that the building will be a large two story and basement structure, built of stone. Plans have been submitted for a very handsome building that will come within the amount the board will have to spend for the purpose.

The illustrated lecture given in the church on Monday evening was well attended and proved to be most interesting.

Vice-President, A. Lane.
2nd Vice-Pres., Jas. Ledingham.
Secretary, Miss C. DeLong.

Com., M. Wilson, Robt. Arnot, Ross Peacock.
Depositary, Merriek Thomas.
Bibles in any kind of print or language can be had of Mr. Thomas at the drug store, and if what may be wanted is not on hand he will order it.
This branch of the Society has made a very creditable record.

The Acre Yield Competition

The Acre Yield Competition at Alberta Provincial Exhibition to be held at Calgary, June 30th to July 7th is a new idea for an exhibition. The following prizes are offered.

Winter Wheat $100.; $50.; $25.

$15.; $10.; $5.

Spring Wheat $100.; $50.; $25.;

$15.; $10.; $5.

Oats $100.; $50. $25. $15. $10.;

$5.

Barley $75; 40; 25.; 15.; 10.;

5.

Flax $60.; 35.; 20.; 10.; 5.

The average amount of grain grown on an acre must be shown and judged 60 per cent for quality, 20 per cent for purity, 15 per cent for quantity and 5 per cent for average. The Exhibition pays freight charges on exhibits originating in Alberta.

It is not likely that anyone in the province has seen the quantity of grain grown on an acre in a pile by itself, and the reader will realize what a great interest will be taken in a building where probably fifty to one hundred such exhibits will be on view from all over the province. Some districts are taking a particular interest in this feature as in the case of Lloydminster Agricultural Society who have already secured six exhibits from their district. The other features of the exhibition promise to be of more than ordinary interest, and the excellent music and attractions, low rates and special trains will undoubtedly make the attendance the largest yet. The entries close on the 18th of June.

Prizes For Clean Crops

Local Agricultural Societies in Alberta are giving 100.00 in prizes for the farmer who produces the best ten acres of clean seed grain.

According to W. C. McKillop, the district officer of the Dominion Seed Branch, "these competitions will have a far reaching effect in improving the quality of grain produced in the province."

It is difficult to prevent the mixing of varieties of grain and the spread of weeds in a system of farming so extensive as ours. To combat this tendency, and to develop heavy-yielding, early varieties, is the purpose of Agricultural Societies in offering these handsome prizes. It is believed that by stimulating a spirit of friendly rivalry and by offering material reward to the successful, the general quality of the crops in a whole neighborhood may be affected.

The support of both the Provincial and Dominion Governments is behind these competitions. The former gives a money grant and the latter supplies expert judges to inspect the fields. The majority of themore progressive Agricultural Societies in the province have already organized competitions.

Traffic in Girls

A New York dispatch says:—With the arrangement of six men in a Brooklyn police court today and the announcement that warrants are out on twenty others the Brooklyn police declared that one of the biggest raids on dealers in white slaves ever made in New York, was in progress.

Eight girls were in court to testify against the prisoners. One of them was only nine years old and the oldest fifteen. They all told the same story—that they had been lured to a moving picture show, where candy and cheap presents were given them, and they were taken to some house maintained as a resort of the white slave bands. The arrests of the six persons was brought about by the Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Children who have been on the trail of the band for some months.

Patronizing Home Trade

The Chronicle has this week turned down a proposition to run a big ad. at lucrative figures for a large eastern mail order house. We have turned it down for the reason that we believe it is to the interest of all to patronize our home business houses. Our home merchants are helping to build up the country; they sell goods at reasonable prices and deserve the support of the surrounding district.

It pays in more was than one to do your trading locally and keep the money in circulation here at home. While the Chronicle could have made money running the mail order ad. yet we refused it because we believe all should do their trading here.

Canadian's Long Walk

London.—A remarkable walking feat has just been accomplished by Joseph Lebreque, a Canadian who has arrived in Liverpool after a journey of 8,000 miles on foot, undertaken for a wager of £100, a diamond ring, and a pin. The conditions of the task were that he was not to work, but borrow or steal, and the journey must be completed by June 1 this year. Seeing that Lebreque will sail for Canada on May 14 the prize is as good as won.

During his wanderings Lebreque, who is the son of a Canadian doctor, wore out no fewer than seven pairs of boots. On an average he has lived on 12 cents a day.

Southern Crops are Not Damaged

MacLeod.—Mr. H. W. Tomlinson, a farmer from Allenfields, who was here attending the farmer's convention, says that he has fall wheat 21 inches high, which he considers rather remarkable for this time of year. He says that the dry weather has retarded the growth of the wheat growing on the knolls, but has not damaged it any. Other farmers who were here make about the same report, though some say that the dry weather is beginning to hurt the crop.

Italy Called on Britain to Intercede

London.—A despatch from Milan says in reference to the Italo-Canadian negotiations that the silk and kid glove trade are suffering in consequence of the Franco-Canadian treaty. It was announced in the chamber of deputies that Great Britain had been invoked to intercede, but without success and unless Canada quickly came to terms. Italy is resolved to strike a blow at the Canadian smoked fish trade.

DAME FASHION'S DECREES

THE woman who is restricted as to dress expenditure is certainly having things made easy for her when the Paris houses turn out their smartest models in combinations of two and sometimes three or more materials. Any showing of the new gowns or suits testifies to this, and if it were not for the danger of maligning ideas in dress, it is most attractive, one might use the term patchwork in describing them. Think of the chance of making over an old frock when thin fabrics as an outside veiling are so much used. It is the day of the foulard gown, yet it is rare to see one without a tunic and waist overlay of chiffon or voile. Take, therefore, your last year's frock and look it boldly in the face, for with good handling it will come out like new. Say that you have the standard dark blue, dotted in white. Get to cover it plain, dark blue silk voile, which in a thin quality is quite as transparent as chiffon cloth and wears far better. A simple fashion that is popular in a Russian blouse tunic. This is cut around the waist in straight widths, gathered over so slightly on to a belt two inches wide of dark blue satin or taffeta. Facings of the same are carried around the bottom of the skirt and up the front opening, which is placed a little to the left. The blouse is usually neither tucked nor plaited, and shaped with a round neck and cap sleeves that ten-cent piece but very close together. The coat fastens up the left side, where it has a wall of Troy trimming of the foulard inset under bands of the cloth. The sleeves have a long cuff with three bands running around, each of which has a cord of foulard on the edge.

Another blue suit, this time a striped mohair braided in black, has a red and white block pattern foulard to line it, and a ponce coat is made up over a brown and white circle and dot. The foulard often appears in cuffs and collars as well as on the inside of the coat.

Don't forget that your faded linen suits and gowns from last year can be made again by a re-dyeing at the dyers. Or if some other shade is preferred the costume may be changed entirely in appearance, provided a color is chosen to which the original one will dye well. Blue is so much in evidence and so lovely in the green tones that are thrown into it late, that it is advised for at least one gown.

If you are looking for a summer fabric that will give the very highest amount of service you cannot do better than to decide upon a good quality washable black and white checks. It comes in both linen and cotton chevrons, the latter excellent in that it is not distinguishable except on examination from woven goods, and therefore can be worn both early in the spring or late in the autumn. Nothing gives greater satisfaction than this material; it wears like iron, washes beautifully, does not soil easily, and, of course, does not fade. With trimmings of moire or satin that can be taken off when it is sent to the laundry, one will have an extremely modish toilet.

White voiles for summer use in motoring, boating, etc., are very satisfactory if made from fine marquisette or white silk voile. These fabrics are less filmy than chiffon and are not affected by dampness. A smart veil in voile, the full width of the material by three yards long, is edged in a two-inch silk fringe. This veil is put on to cover the entire hat. Colors are also good in these textiles, either solid or with stripes or dots. There is no wear out to them, so that it is a real economy to buy them in preference to more perishable kinds. They do not come ready made; one must purchase the material by the yard, and hem and trim them at home. An edge of lace is a pretty decoration, as is a few rows of silk soutache as border. Lovely new shades come in marquisette and voile that make up into veils quite out of the ordinary and different from those that others will have.

The sudden craze for "Chantier" novelties, since the successful premiere of Hostand's play of that name in Paris, is apparent on every side, and especially in the prevalence of a beautiful new shade of red, which is between cerise and scarlet, and is indeed the veritable color that is found in the cock's comb. It has appeared in hat trimmings, in diaphanous scarfs, in neckwear and girdles, in printed chiffons, but especially in parasols. These new red parasols are distinctly fascinating; particularly those that have the long ebony sticks, with a carved bird of some kind for a handle—parrot, stork, red-winged blackbird, tanager, and best of all, a cock or cock's head, all done in the natural colors. As long as the furore lasts—for it has come with such violence that it may exhaust itself rapidly—these red, bird-handled parasols will be much sought after; for being imported novelties, and truly artistic in workmanship, they are not so easy to find. It happens also, at present, the Chantier head is first choice, and disputes supremacy with the garish jeweled ones of large size, apparent on all sides. Mons. Hostand is to be profoundly thanked for having supplied the motif for so many real novelties in his remarkable drama of the barnyard.

Other imported novelties in parasol handles show that there is a distinct enlargement of this season. For instance, those buying a nearly flat round gun-metal top for a handle, discover that it is in reality a vanity box, capable of holding a modest supply of powder and a puff, being three inches in reach about to the elbow. Put an edge of silk or satin around these also. Such a tunic will disguise any half-worn look or unfortunate spots or discolorations and give an up-to-date touch to a frock that otherwise one might have discarded. This model is the simplest of the many that one may utilize for such purposes, and it is varied in a number of ways. One blue and white foulard had blue voile for the top with cone-shaped ornaments or buttons in a straight row on the lower edge and used to hold up the blouse in points on the shoulders. With this there is a patent leather belt.

If the Russian blouse is not becoming, make a tunic that hangs in a slantwise drapery across the front of the skirt. With this to trim the waist there is not a bumpy model that will look too thick if so treated, bring a broad band of chiffon over each shoulder, with two wide tucks laid in. Have a folded soft girde of chiffon and an oblong buckle covered in it.

Not only are foulards used as foundation for various transparencies, but so also is every other sort of silk imaginable. Scarcely a wardrobe that does not include among its collection some sort of this taffeta, lousine or Oriental silk that has served as an afternoon or bridge gown. Unless actually in rags, these can all be doctored up with thin veils to cover their sins. Such a pretty model that would serve to go by, in which the foundation is a gray and white fleecy stripe summer silk. The skirt is long and cut plain and circular, with a seam up the front. The bodice is a simple, easy-fitting blouse without tucks, running up into a pointed yoke and high collar of English thread lace. Over this there is a loose coat of French blue silk voile. It is embroidered in soutache in a geometrical pattern arranged in a straight border. From the shoulders the material hangs rather full and is not shaped in, but is caught close at the waist by being tacked to the silk beneath. Under the arms the sides of the coat meet and are held together by straps of soutache. Below the train of the hem there is a straight band of matching taffeta silk, scarcely fuller than the under skirt into which the voile is gathered, and allowed to blouse over a bit. This is an attractive arrangement on a slim figure, but it is not to be thought of by anyone who is at all stout.

It is a new departure for foulards to have trimmings of contrasting colors and materials, but in this season, when all sorts and descriptions are joined to make a whole, there are no end of such mixtures. In the telling these hardly appear successful, but not until actually seen is one convinced of their attraction. One dark blue foulard model, for instance, dotted in white coin spots, has a wide crink girde of Persian lousine and a good deal of blue in the back ground. Pippings of the same are used as trimming around the yoke and on the cuffs. We are fast becoming accustomed to this treatment, and a foulard without some other color to which it begins to look bare and unfinished.

Green is noted again and again with blue and white gowns, whether the light or dark color predominates. Either chiffon satin or a soft finished tulle is used, and long swathes of it, cravats, plastrons, etc., are often seen. A rather brilliant shade is chosen, grass green or hunter's green.

Foulard, as lining, has demonstrated itself as most pleasing in a new use. With dark colors and substantial goods, such as serge, chevrons, hop sackings, etc., its softness and pliability are delightful. It is the modish lining of the day and is found in the majority of recently imported models.

A navy blue serge, made with a jaunty little Russian blouse coat, is lined in olive green foulard with dots the size of a diameter. This is an altogether delightful style, for when the curved disk is marked with a monogram cut deep into the dark metal, there is an element of chic about it, truly desirable. Others having a large square top, are made of jade, or apatite, or malachite or the beautiful Mexican onyx, and sometimes these semi-precious stones are set in a rim of silver or gun-metal, but mostly without the metal. The decorated porcelain ones, in Dresden design, are charming, as also, are those of Japanese bronze and carved ivory. The latter are particularly expensive, and are a possession which can be removed to a new umbrella indefinitely, because they are genuine objects of art, executed by a master hand in China or Japan. Some of the new handles make use of the pretty transparent enamel, and others again, the tinted mother-of-pearl, which is blue or green is daintily pretty.

PATRIOTIC HELIGOLAND

COUNT REVENTLOW in the German Reichstag recently suggested that if it prove impossible to make Heligoland impregnable the best course would be to blow it up. The inhabitants of this little island have changed masters several times, but like most small communities they are intensely patriotic and consider their tiny homeland the ideal residence of the world. The air is so invigorating that one can, according to a visitor, dance half the night and get up early the following morning with no sense of exhaustion. There is plenty of color in the island, and no mud. The beach is perfect, and the lobsters are the best in Europe. Cow's milk is a luxury and meat of any kind scarce, but the natives are content to drink the milk of sheep and goats and consider sea gulls an appetizing dish. They thrive on this diet; the average death age is sixty-three, and epidemics are unknown.

My Adventures as a Flying Man

(A CHAT WITH COUNT ZEPPELIN)

There is one thing which the world and his wife admire more than another, it is pluck and perseverance. For that reason it is not difficult to understand the enthusiasm aroused on the Continent by the flying feats of Count Zeppelin. For fifty years he has been striving to solve the problem of aerial navigation. He has begged himself, spent his whole fortune of $100,000, borne the gibes and ridicule poured upon him by sceptics, risked his life time after time, and yet never abandoned faith in his ideas.

In the following words he described his aims to an interviewer a short time ago:

"I intend to build a vessel which will be able to travel to places which cannot be approached—or only with great difficulty—by other means of transport; to undiscovered coasts or interiors; in a straight line across land or water where ships are to be sought for; from one fleet station or army to another, carrying persons and despatches; for observation of the movements of hostile fleets or armies—not for active participation in actual warfare."

"My balloon must be able to travel several days without renewing provisions, fuel, or gas. It must travel quickly enough to reach a certain goal in a given number of days, and must possess sufficient rigidity and non-inflammability to ascend, travel, and descend under ordinary conditions."

And the Count has succeeded to the extent of being able to remain in the air for many hours and travel hundreds of miles.

"But I am not satisfied," he remarked. "The German Government want an airship which will fulfil the following conditions: First, it must be able to manoeuvre in the air for twenty-four hours; secondly, it must be able to land without injury to itself either on water or earth; and in the last place it must be able to ascend to such a height that it cannot be injured by bullet-fire. Strident conditions, but very necessary if the navigable balloon is to prove of real service. Do I think I can fulfil these conditions? That, of course, is impossible to say, but I am going to try."

And this wonderful master of the air spoke with that quiet earnestness which almost convinced one that he would succeed, in spite of the fact that he is over seventy years of age. He is a man who speaks little of the past. From others one learns of how one time he became so poor that he had to live in a little cottage on an allowance made to him by his friends. When, at thirty years of age, the Count married a lady belonging to one of the German aristocratic families, his friends and relatives who had regarded him almost as a lunatic on account of his devotion to the task of inventing aerial machines, thought that his wife would wean him from his eccentric ways. But in this respect they were disappointed.

The marriage itself and the ensuing honeymoon interrupted for a time Count Zeppelin's devotion to his research work, but within a year of the wedding he was again hard at work on the solution of the problem, aided and encouraged by his young wife. Year by year passed, and still the aristocratic mechanic continued to construct all sorts of flying contrivances for the most part refused to fly. He and his wife, however, were fully agreed that he should devote his whole life to the task of teaching mankind how to fly.

The Countess has followed with unvarying interest and self-sacrifice the scientific researches which involved the expenditure of their entire fortune, and Count Zeppelin is the first to admit how much he owes to the encouragement of his wife.

For over thirty years the Count devoted himself to the construction of flying machines, but, he remarked, "the risks were too great and the successes too small to warrant the continuation of such experiments. On one occasion I fell from a height of 40 feet, but happened to alight on some bushes, which broke my fall and saved my life, although I received a number of painful wounds. On another occasion I fell from a considerable height, but again had the good fortune to alight on soft earth without sustaining more than a broken leg. These were but two of a number of accidents which led me to finally abandon the flying machine for the navigable airship."

"But even they have their perils, Count?"

"Yes; I suppose one of the narrowest escapes I had was when last year I fell asleep in the cabin of my airship. By some lucky chance I did not sleep for long, and only a few minutes after I awoke the airship was in flames. Had I remained asleep I should certainly have been burned to death."

The adventures of Count Zeppelin, however, would almost fill a volume, for, apart from his machines and balloons, he has had innumerable escapes. He fought in the Franco-German war, and is said to have been the first German soldier to cross the Rhine into France.

Once with three other officers and seven dragons, he set out on a patrol into the enemy's country. On one occasion he was dismounted by a French lance and narrowly escaped death. Finally, the little party was cornered in the courtyard of an inn at Hethelhofen, and all but one were murdered. This was Count Zeppelin. Escaping, he got hold of another horse and made his way back to his own army through a mountainous and woody district infested by the enemy. During his adventures he risked his life for whole days in a thick wood surrounded by French troops, ultimately managing to evade them and getting through with valuable information.

Another adventure illustrates the Count's wonderful skill as a swimmer. It was during the war with Austria in 1860 that he had to carry a despatch across the river. But all the bridges were held by the enemy. He mounted his horse, and the animal was galloped to such an extent that it dropped dead just when it reached a spot beyond the enemy's fire. In full uniform, with boots reaching to the knee, the Count attempted to swim the river, just in the middle his strength left him. He let himself go, touched the bottom, pushed himself off again, and continued this process until he reached the other bank.

It would be difficult to point to a more varied and exciting career than that of the veteran inventor, and it is characteristic of the man that although some eight years ago, to quote his own words, "I actually decided, in an outburst of despair, to give up the fateful problem of aerial navigation, the fascination of the subject was so strong that I found I could not abandon my life's work. It is a great gratification to my wife and myself that I have accomplished so much, and it was a proud day when the Kaiser termed me 'the greatest German of the twentieth century.' An exaggerated compliment, perhaps, but none the less appreciated."

THE MAN WHO WINS

Traits That Make for Success and the Way to Acquire Them

(By Emory J. Haynes)

THE practice of quick decision is both a power and a peril. By far the larger part of mankind want time to think a thing over. The ability to arrive at results rapidly has always been prized, but of late years more highly prized. The danger of mistakes is evident. But the power that goes with time-saving and the advantage over the other man are so great that few things stand for so much in success.

All thought is quick. The slow thinker is only a confused thinker. He thinks of too many things and goes a roundabout way. The man of quick action thinks to the one point and eliminates a mass of irrelevant ideas. He follows the straight trail. His mind sees only the few points that relate to the given matter. Often he is of actually less mental ability than the man who sees all sides of a question. But by practice he becomes bold and ready to take risks on the few facts which seem to him certain.

There may be something of intuition in his action, and this he cultivates. He "feels" that he is right. Be the explanation what it may, the fact remains that he is in great demand. The quick decision is not a matter of advice. One must learn to depend upon himself. More time is taken talking with other men than in any other way. Learn to act for yourself. You gain time and acquire the habit. The courage is commanded is a thing of cultivation. Surely the hesitating habit grows upon a man. Fear and uncertainty grow in the mind like weeds. The newly coined word "nerve" is good and tells its own story.

Life is never safe. To be slow is not of itself to go safely. Training the mind to give its verdict quickly is not so very difficult. One can order himself, like a soldier, to present arms, to decide now and stop fluttering. The mind is a tool box. The tools should be in place where one can put his hand on them at once. Facts should be labeled on the shelves. The slow thinker has his mind chaotic. He gathers a lot of facts, reads a great deal, observes much, but all this is simply dumped on the mind's floor. The quick thinker may not know half as much, but what he knows is at his fingers' ends. It is an age of many sensations; never before were so many impressions made on the mind.

The press tells us of such a cloud of dust of current history that it is necessary to learn to discreetly forget quickly. Otherwise our toolbox is jammed full of things we do not need. You may have noticed that a man of quick executive action is a specialist. He retains only facts that concern his line. Often he is narrow and poorly informed on general topics. It is the price he pays. But in the market of workers he can demand his price in turn.

Now, hear it mind what was written above. That all thought is quick. It moves faster than the light. If one applies to rapid decision let him discipline himself to thinking to the point. It generally saves the day.

THE FOOD VALUE OF CHESTNUTS

THE fruit of the chestnut tree is nearly as valuable as bread and more valuable than potatoes for dietetic purposes. Two pounds of chestnuts contain 118 grammes of starch and eight of fat.

The annual production of chestnuts in France is over 2,000,000 quintals of 220 pounds. That means food for many workmen. But the hide-tanners keep the product from the food-market by buying it in large quantities for use in their business. Producers make more profit by selling their chestnuts for tanning than by disposing of them for food.

An old man is a poorhouse who was asked by a visitor if he had any source of income replied, "Ma'am, if you must know, I have never got any money, but I've got good backing. I've got the Busset backing. I'm backed by one of the richest counties in France."

STIRLING

IN SUNNY SOUTHERN ALBERTA

SCALE, TWO INCHES EQUALS ONE MILE

The above map gives at a glance the ideal location of the new town of Stirling. There are three railways radiating from it, one to the north, one to the west, and one to the south.

The map also shows the space at the junction reserved by the railway for yards, trackage, station grounds, etc. The elevator, chopping mill, loading platform and stockyards are within this area, being located just north of the depot. There is more space reserved for railway purposes in New Stirling than in any town west of Moose Jaw.

The new town of Stirling is growing by leaps and bounds. Last June it was open prairie; to-day a thriving town, with local and long distance telephone. A newspaper, "The New Stirling Star," has just been established, and a telegram from the editor states that the first issue will be out this week.

Local and General

W. J. Taugher, M. D., arrived in Crossfield Sunday morning last and has hung out his shingle here.

Mr. Byers has moved his family into the apartments on the second floor of the Maylea building on Railway avenue.

F. R. Parker, who has purchased a livery business in Calgary, was in town over Sunday. He expects to remove his family to Calgary soon.

Major Boyle has received squadron supplies including uniforms, saddles, rifles, and 1100 rounds of ammunition to be used in training
the men before going into camp

On Friday morning last the Maple Leaf flour mills and the two elevators, chop house, store house, driving sheds and office, at Didsbury, were completely destroyed by fire. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is estimated at $75,000. There is talk of rebuilding the mill.

A severe hail storm in Manitoba
last week, doing considerable damage to growing grain, is a reminder to farmers that it is none too early to insure against hail. It is better to be safe than sorry. A large part of this continent is more or less subject to hail storms, and Alberta is no exception, though we do not get as much destructive hail as do some other parts.

W. H. Robarts, of Huron College, London, Canada, has been appointed by the Bishop of Calgary to take charge of the Church of England in Crossfield and Airdrie. The first service will be held here in the
I. O. O. F. hall on Sunday, June 12, at 11 o'clock in the morning, and will be conducted by Cecil F. Reede of Calgary. Mr. Robarts will hold the services regularly every Sunday morning afterwards in the same hall.

Cabinet Announced

The anticipated announcement of the appointments for the new provincial cabinet was made on Wednesday. The cabinet is as follows:
A. L. Sifton, president of the executive council, provincial treasurer, minister of public works.

Charles R. Mitchell, minister of education, attorney general.

Archibald McLean, provincial secretary.

Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture.

The distribution of portfolios is somewhat different from what had been expected. Premier Sifton and Mitchell are taking on much more extensive labors than their predecessors and Marshall has much less than formerly.

The ministers will all have to stand for re-election with the possible exception of Marshall, who it is claimed does not have to go back to his constituents as thirty days have not elapsed since his resignation as a member of the Rutherford government, and for the further reason that his resignation has never been accepted. This, however, is questioned by those not affiliated with the new government.

Welcome Moisture

The storm of Wednesday and Thursday was general throughout the Canadian West. It began with a high wind which blew for several hours and is reported to have done slight damage in some localities. A few buildings were unroofed in Calgary. Snow fell all over Alberta to a depth of several inches.

It is quite the usual thing to get a good snow storm in May, but it is not often that it comes so late as June. However, it is heartily welcomed by the farmers as it furnishes moisture in the very best form and just at the right time. It is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars to the west.

Snow in June may have a chilly sound to dwellers in southern climes but it has not been accompanied by cold weather and Canadians regard it as a great blessing.

Acme News

We understand that the Presbyterian church has applied for lots on the north side of Nolan street and that arrangements are going forward. The following are the members of the building committee;
Messrs Patterson, Clark, McLean
and Pratt.

Mr. Randlemon, of Bowden, is erecting a new house east of A.
Wheeler's place.

A party of young men went out for an auto ride last Sunday evening and in a few minutes they were seen coming into town on foot.
After a rest they struck out again and were soon seen shoving their car back by hand. Come out for a ride boys, its sport.

Mr. Lapierre who purchased the Alberta Hotel has moved the old Klondike down close to the hotel that he might give better accommodation to the visitors who come in on Tuesday's and Friday's train.
